

CULTIVATOR OF TEAMS, SPEAKER, AUTHOR

“No personal success will top the satisfaction a true servant leader experiences seeing the people they lead achieve new heights and aspirations.”

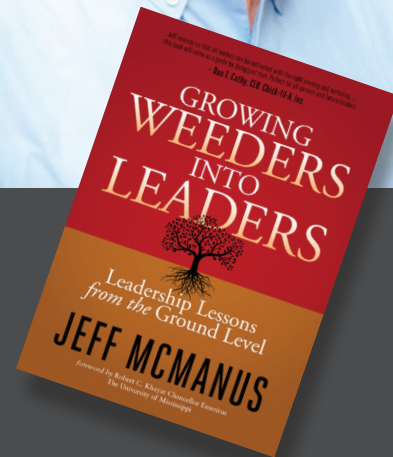

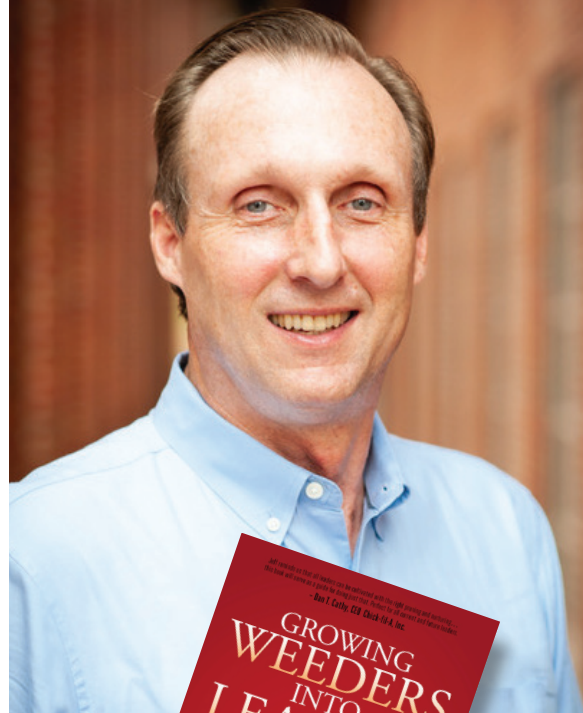

One of the biggest challenges any leader faces is being ready when opportunity knocks. Facilities' quality greets the customer as they enter the front door and that quality matters. Having an inspired and motivated workforce, ready to respond daily, is vital to any organization's success. Opportunity waits for no one and no one knows that better than Jeff McManus.

Jeff has experience managing teams performing well below their full potential. Low morale and high turnover always make the turnaround seem overwhelming. Within each opportunity, Jeff built systems for developing a deep level of buy-in that empowers employees. In one two-year period, Jeff's team had reduced their workforce by 23%, mowing time by 60% and had won their first of five national landscape championships.

Inspiring employee engagement, developing skills and rewarding efforts is called leadership - the ability to see how the needs of the organization can meet the needs of its employees. That's why Forbes Magazine, Facilities Executive, Huffington Post, Sports Field Turf and others have cited Jeff's work. Jeff will share his process for achieving five-star results- every day - because again opportunity waits for no one.

Here are a few things you and your team can expect to learn from Jeff:

- The importance of purpose and passion
- The Grow Theory
- The use of results to break down organizational silos
- New definitions of leadership
- Alternate ideas for growth
- How to give others the opportunity to lead

"It can be difficult to find speakers for the Professional Development section of our state turfgrass conference, but this year we hit a home run with Jeff McManus. His message on empowering individuals to lead their teams resonated with our group. Jeff kept a group of 300+ people engaged for over three hours, which is not an easy task!"
